Bids for the building of the boom at Danville Junction will be opened by a committee of the town of Auburn, at the office of Hon. Seth M. Millikin, in Auburn, on Saturday, July 10th, at 2 o'clock P. M.

Cumberland

The Press says that Chief Engineer Andrews who was one of the excursion party on the P. & O. Road Tuesday, narrowly escaped a most serious if not fatal accident. As he was crossing the Saco River bridge, on a sort of platform, he slipped upon a plank which tipped letting him down among the timbers and he fell from one to another the whole distance to the solid rock bottom, thirty feet. Strange to say he escaped without serious injury being able to report with but few bruises.

It is said that the stock of the Kendall Bros. C. P. & P. Co. in Bridgton was sold last week at auction and will result about 10 cents on the dollar to creditors. Also that the C. P. Kendall Co. is to be put into bankruptcy.

Bids for the building of the steam fire engine house will be opened by a committee of the city of Portland, at the office of the City Clerk, on Monday, July 5th, at 7½ o'clock P. M. The work is to be completed and the engine delivered in Portland and one set of harness.

Bowdoin College—Junior Prize Compositions—Within were awarded the first to Watts the second to Bates of that class. The Sophomore prize declamations took place in Lemont Hall Monday evening. They were as follows: Perry and Merrill the third to Pope. The students are passing the ordeal of examination the examination lasting with the Freshmen class on Wednesday. The boat crew starts for Gardiner Friday of this week.

Franklin

The Jay men of Phillips and Strong are now connected with the outer world by the completion of the wires of the Sandy River Telegraph Company from Farmington to Phillips—distance of seventeen miles.

Kennebec

The Augusta Journal says that eleven more of the employes of the Maine Insane Hospital at the works on that city are to be discharged on the 10th inst.—from which the Insane complained. Hereafter the blacksmith shop will have 2 men instead of 3 as at present, the tinsmith shop and 2 from the blacksmith shop. There is plenty of work and a full crew could be kept constantly and profitably employed. Eleven men are to be left to guard from the shops in Watervilles, and three from the shops in Farmington

Oxford

RAILING AT THE RECORD

For parties who were so anxious for 'aggressive movements and who talked about going into "line of battle" with "sixty days rations," the champions of General Roberts have been strangely demoralized by the calm dispassionate and candid review of history presented in Col. Smith's letter. Some one who is ashamed to sign his name to what he calls an "open letter," which document sounds very much like that "patriot soldier" Dr Jordan, glibly talks about lying and is boldly assertive that when Bradbury was up for Governor Gen. Roberts had not left the field. The truthfulness of that statement may be measured by the fact that General Roberts tendered the resignation of the 2d of 1862, was discharged from the service January 13 1863 and Hon Bradbury was the Democratic candidate for Governor at the election held in September 1863. Gen Roberts would do well to share the zeal of such indiscreet defenders.

But more remarkable is the chicanery with which Marcellus Emery denies the authenticity of the following shameful words quoted by Col Smith as duly appeared in the Bangor Democrat just after the first battle of Bull Run in 1861:

"LINCOLN'S BULLETINS HAVE NOT TRIBUTE FACTS. THEY FIND NOW THE HOSPITABLE GRAVES TO WHICH THE CHIVALROUS SONS OF THE SOUTH WILL WELCOME THE INVADERS OF THEIR HOMES."

It is rather late to disgrace the authority by first producing the above extract, since it is to be entirely upon publishing in our columns excerpts directly from the type of the Democrat, nightly in our issues of August 14th and September 9th 1861, without calling any attempt at denial on the part of Marcellus Emery. Perhaps Marcellus Emery himself intends to take on the guise of a Union patriot and to convince the public that he was an ardent lay disciple throughout. Perhaps he even proposes to deny that he produced the goods on the 19th of April 1861 —

"If GEORGE WASHINGTON deserves the title of TRAITOR THEN JOHN JEFFERSON DAVIS. Bowdoin College never more justly bestowed a degree than that conferred upon him and if with a hundred before her Trustees will bestow the same mark of honor upon the HOST OF THE BRIGHTEST FLAME UPON IT."

Or that immediately after the rebel assault upon Fort Sumter he admitted to the Democrats of Maine such as in strong words as these

"DEMOCRATS OF MAINE!—The fatal wars of the South have gathered around Charleston as some fathers of old gathered around Boston in prospect of THE SAME SWEET RESULT. For the principles which you have upheld and fought with your votes, your voices and your strong right arm. Your sympathy is with the defenders of the truth and right. Those who leave their homes to DEFEND THE UNION AND THE LAWS DO NOT LEAVE THEIR FAMILIES. While they are NO FRIENDS OF YOURS. No enemies of Democracy. Will you aid them in their work of subjugation and ruin?"

When the Government at Washington calls for volunteers to crush out this rebellion and their work of subjugation and ruin and in the spontaneous phrase of exploring the Democrat, nothing and pouring the public property and collecting the revenue THEREBY FORCIBLY ROBBING THE ARMY AND BID THE MINIONS OF DESPOTISM DO A DIRTY DEED FOR THEIR MASTERS.

It would be hardly worth while to quote further extracts which the champion of General Roberts on the rack of the patriot will have to read if convicted of treason. They are likely to be remembered by all honest people for especially by those who battled for the Union to never vote for or further trust any man who can deny his own published abhorrence.

GEN ROBERTS GOD-FATHER

From the Portland Press.

It is a fitting rather a sad contrast between the action of the Whig and Mr Pillsbury of the Ware Sentinel. In the course of his remarks upon the late Democratic Convention the Ware orator stated that Mr Pillsbury was on that occasion presented the name of Gen Roberts and vouched for him as a patriot of other was guilty of unpatriotic conduct in the draft. Mr Pillsbury replies that the editor of the Whig is a liar. Now the Ware comes with its facts which are taken from the file of the Franklin Journal published in 1864 by Mr Pillsbury which to say the least are rather startling for a gentleman who appears in a political and Father for a candidate and declares that he was a patriot soldier."

We cannot give all of the extracts which the Ware Presents to show that Mr Pillsbury is guilty of the offense charged against him. Indeed, it is not necessary. Here were but two articles then. One was doing the utmost to sustain the Government and encourage the people in supporting the war. The other was doing its utmost to shake the confidence of the country in the Government and to discourage and dishearten the people. Of this last class was Mr Pillsbury. He may now have forgotten it or seeing the wickedness of such a course may have repented the evil he cannot mention but so long as a file of his printed utterances is in existence he cannot afford to fling about the he very re kless unless he delights in seeing the ghost of his disloyalty.

The most critical year of the war was 1863. The country was despondent and disheartened with defeat. It was a time when the patriot soldier would have been in the service and the patriot at home doing his utmost to strengthen the hearts of the people. Now what was Gen. Roberts God-father doing?

January 9 1863 an editorial of the Press charges President Lincoln with deception and falsehood and declares that the soldiers would not have volunteered had they known that they had been deceived. March 6, 1863, in a bitter editorial, Mr. Pillsbury denounced the draft as "an unconstitutional law of Abraham the First," ridiculed the greenbacks as "shinplasters" and declared that "everything is tending directly to a state of anarchy." The next week he printed an article which contains the following —

"It is useless to talk longer about preserving the free Government if our Fathers, it has already become a mass of ruins and has virtually ceased to exist American freedom has been wrecked during the brief period that the Apostates to Liberty (i. e. President Lincoln and his advisers) have had control. * * * The great question for the future is whether there is enough statesmanship left in the country to rebuild the Temple of Liberty, to drive out the architects of ruin "and reconstruct a free Government."

Just before the battle of Gettysburg, he said that "the evil of to-day is regarded by those who can foresee and calculate the future as altogether light and endurable compared with the disasters that are looked for to-morrow."

In his issue of June 26, 1863, Mr. Pillsbury gave an account of an anti-war meeting at Kingfield at which he spoke. Of this he says:

"We have attended many political meetings at Kingfield, but none of them ever compared with this one in numbers and enthusiasm. There seems to be an universal feeling that we have suffered enough from the clamor of abolition fanatics, and a determination to effect a change in the management of public affairs."

This meeting was followed by a riotous resistance in Kingfield, to the draft. Mr. Pillsbury might not have advocated resistance in so many words, but as there was to be no general election for fifteen months, the logical conclusion to which those in sympathy with Mr Pillsbury must come, is that the federal authority and its orders for the draft must be resisted.

Mr Pilsbury was quiet for a time after the Kingfield fiasco. Some of his political associates had been at Fort Lafayette. In the fall of 1863, however, he regained his courage and renewed his disloyal utterances, among which were the following

"Another proclamation of the President will be found under the telegraph heads calling for 300 000 men in addition to those required under existing orders. This is a necessary policy. * * * Let those who believe in the policy redeem their pledges and answer this call for more men

"The people have been patient, forbearing and suffering but their patience is about worn out.

"This conscription is a fair specimen of abolition wisdom, and if the people do not turn out the crazy imbecipetuous, conscription after conscription will come upon us."

"This war farce is carried on unrelentingly and systematically, as if the question is reciprocally one of life and death."

"Conscription (or draftings is a policy resorted to only by monarchical governments and its execution can only be enforced by the iron hand of military despotism."

As these utterances were made more than a year before the Presidential election of 1864 it is hardly possible that Mr. Pillsbury could intend them to have a bearing on that campaign. Of course he will attempt to make this appear, but candid men will be convinced that at that period the stern patriot was lost in the contemptible partisan, and that Democratic partisanship in 1863 was only another name for treason. It did not in degree, but Mr Pillsbury had the misfortune, as it proved, to be a little in advance of his party. The latter was content to wait for Gen Roberts as the "patriot soldier" except with the qualification that he had always been a war-like Democrat.

THE LOADED CASE

The story which Loader and Pierce spread before the world two weeks ago was so grossly improbable on its face and so unsupported by surrounding circumstances that nobody can have been surprised at the denouement. The tale never deserved a moment's serious consideration. But there are some points in connection with it which will require investigation and that without any necessary delay.

It appears that Loader told his story to Mr Tilton's counsel by whom, as he stated, it was reduced to writing, and it is also asserted, duly sworn to. Of Pierce, that the counsel aided the alibist by producing a diagram of the Tilton dwelling. All this took place before the evidence in the case was closed, and if there was any truth on the part of the plaintiff in the truth of Loader's monstrous tale or the intention at any time of putting him on the stand the proper moment to introduce the testimony was then, and the proper way to introduce it was of course understood by the able gentlemen who seem to have consulted over the preparation. Loader not being called, the natural inference is that Mr Morris knew he was lying. Some days later however, while the closing argument of Mr Beach could be interrupted by this witness was republished and spread before the jury in the columns of The Herald. Then the counsel for the plaintiff asked to have the case reopened in order that Loader and Pierce might be called. The request of course was refused. But the attention of the jury had been directed to the narrative of the effort to which it is now shown to have been given no ordinary prejudice were incorporated in the case and inside papers of the record and the defense had no opportunity to make even a remark upon them.

We have no intention of misrepresentation. Considered conducive to Mr Beach or Mr Morris, we certainly should not wish to assist either of them of manufacturing evidence and suborning perjury. But we do feel plainly that credibility or too much credit has been placed upon the position from which they must be sustained by a charge of conspiracy, a thorough inquiry into this affair and a very frank public explanation of his own connection with it both seem urgently required as they seem to have made it discussions in a most questionable light.

Meantime the public will not fail to note the malignant and desperate nature of the outrage waged against Mr Beecher. Here is a single man, struggling through an unprecedented six months contest for what should be a verdict to hunt his friends clean his life. At the very crisis of the struggle these monstrous perjuries are published against him in time to affect the minds of the jurymen put to influence the public. It is a crime, to which it would be almost impossible to affix a savage penalty. The perjurers should drink home for the rest of their lives. If men of more consequence subborned the perjury, a like punishment would be altogether too light for them.—N. Y. Tribune.

On the first of July $100 000 of Maine State 6's will mature, but no provision has been made for paying them in Boston, so far as we can learn.—Boston Advertiser.

State Treasurer Hatch informs us that the above is incorrect in the following particulars. First the 6's which matured on the first instant amount to but $30,000, second, they are payable at the office in Augusta and third ample provision has been made for immediate payment of them.

INSURANCE COMMISSIONER'S REPORT. We copy from the Kennebec Journal the following abstract of the second part of the report of Hon Joshua Nye, Insurance Commissioner, just received. It appears that at the close 1874 there were thirty-three life, and three accident insurance companies authorized to transact business in the State. Five companies have been admitted since last report, and four life companies have withdrawn. The authority of one company to do business has been revoked.

The gross assets of life companies doing business in the State the past year amounted to —$346,588 570 49. The liabilities amounted to $317 771,490 29. The total surplus, as regards policy holders, is $28,817 170.27. The income amounted to $103,132,414 69. The expenditures amounted to $70,650,011 98. The total excess of income over expenditures is $32,515,078.07.

Policies terminated by death or maturity during the past year, 7 480, amounting to $20,5678,191. Terminated by expiry 1,717, amounting to $1,785 357. Terminated by surrender, 26,545, amounting to $75,808,712. Terminated by lapse, 65,471, amounting to $142 891,547.

The number of policies issued by life companies during the past year was 2,776. Amount insured, $4,150,450.00. Premiums received, $795,534.14. Losses and claims incurred during the year, $281,788.60 Losses and claims paid, $332,589 45 Amount of taxes paid on premiums, $1,477.10. Whole number of policies in force in the State at close of 1874, 16,491. Whole amount insured, $37,522,4 4.00.

The Government revenue officers have seized the distillery of J. M. Schnitker, Kriesmann & Co., Fred Meiko and Henry Sternrieder of Covington, Ky., for large frauds.

The assistant Treasurer at New York yesterday, opened the bids for $1,000,000 of gold. These amounted to $8,475,000. The lowest was $114.80 and the highest $118.90.

The California State Temperance Reform Convention, on Wednesday, nominated a full ticket of State officers, headed by W. E. Lovett for Governor.

CARD.

The hearty thanks of the Independent Congregational society, the members of the Sabbath School, and their invited guests, are hereby tendered to the enterprising firm of Messrs ROSS & HOWELL for their repeated endeavors in contributing to the comfort and welfare of this community. While enjoying the superb and thoroughly convenient appointments of the new elegant and commodious barge "Clifford," we both realized and appreciated more than ever before their efforts in our behalf. May happiness and success ever attend them. Our sincere thanks are also gratefully tendered to F. C. Mower, the courteous and obliging Captain of the fine C. S. Sanford to Henry Buckmaster, the genial engineer, to J. J. Wells, caterer on board the "Clifford," and last but not least, to Captain Jeremiah French the veteran superintendent of the barge, for their kind and unremitting labors in our behalf during our "glorious excursion" on the 1st Instant to Northport and back

A Card to the Public!

BANGOR TROTTING PARK.

The proprietor of the above Park gives public notice that, having been to great expense to place the track in excellent condition, and desirous of the community a proper recognition of his rights in such a manner as may be deemed best by the public, is determined to protect himself in the matter of letting his horses, on all days, excepting those of the Penobscot Exhibition.

Any gentleman who has not paid his rent and will make the same, can procure a ticket of the proprietor, or at the office of the Penobscot Exhibition.

Notice is also hereby given that any person found within the enclosure on days of advertised trots, who has entered in any unlawful way and without paying the regular fee, will be arrested and prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

The above is rendered necessary from the fact that nuisances are daily growing on the track without paying for the privilege, and also that during my recent June meeting, from a quarter to one half the number of spectators supposed to be present had scaled the fence or gone over the same keeping by false statements of their right to do so.

It is to be hoped that all lovers of horses and horse flesh, and those desiring to see racing conducted in a fair and honorable manner, will assist the proprietor by their patronage in his endeavor to improve the present unsatisfactory state of things.

No good man will—none else must—and break over the rules above expressed.

To all those friends and the public at large the subscriber extends his sincere thanks for their patronage.

THE BLACK HILLS.

A Letter telling of Gold Discoveries—Trouble with the Indians anticipated

NEW YORK July 1st A letter from Camp Jenny Custer's Gulch Black Hills, June 20th says There is gold here. Col. Dodge and other officers can vouch for this Mr Jenny has seen the gold and is willing to that fact not to mention the other command of soldiers and teamsters Mr Jenny declines about committing himself to a positive statement, however as far as to the presence of gold. The extent of area which will indicate the presence of gold cannot be estimated It will have to be carefully examined and explored The soldiers and teamsters take quite naturally to the work of panning gold Quartz veins are very numerous in every direction, and there has been some rough mining by miners. The indications of the rock show that it is gold-bearing, although silver is found Gulch diggings or placer mines are superficial in character although they attracted pioneers. The Indians so far have not been seen, but of course there are the usual signs. They no doubt look upon Col Dodge's command as another military expedition to capture and take out of the Hills the miners found here. What their course will be when they discover their mistake no one can tell. It may be that when the Washington delegation of half-breeds return there will be a raid and murderous manners are to be looked after, and likely mines may be counted upon

THE BROOKLYN TRIAL

THE JURY REPORT A DISAGREEMENT

THE QUESTIONS AND REMARKS OF THE JUDGE.

AGAIN SENT OUT TO DELIBERATE.

The Notes Sent to Judge Neilson!

OUT FOR ANOTHER NIGHT.

The Loader-Price Retraction.

NEW YORK July 1 The efforts of Beecher's lawyers to have the Loader-Price affidavit as to the falsity of the previous statements before the jury will be renewed this afternoon, when Messrs. Evarts and Beach will probably decide the matter

A Walk to the Court Room—The Counsel and Parties to the Suit meet Per.

BROOKLYN July 1. A large crowd assembled all the morning in the Brooklyn Court House At 11.45 there was a general rush into the City Court, consequent on the report that Judge Neilson had just received communications from the jury and that the Judge thereupon had sent for the counsel and for Beecher and Tilton. The report is probably true. Usher Murray is now (11.50) arranging chairs for the Beecher party The Judge will come in about 1 P M

Arrival of Mr Beecher and Others.

Mrs Beecher arrived in court at noon in company with Mrs. Murray, and was received with clapping of hands. The photographer in the gallery is preparing to take a picture of the court. Assistant Postal Clerk Bliss, Mrs. Howard, Dr. John Raymond of Vassar College, Dr E. Beecher, Mrs Col Beecher and a number of ladies of Plymouth church have arrived. Col Beecher, John Southwick and others have arrived The counsel are in the Judges' private room. Up to 1 o'clock Tilton had not arrived Beecher will be absent, having gone to Peekskill this morning. At 1.25 the Judge took his place on the bench, and counsel for Tilton came in. Beecher was received with applause and there was another outburst when Evarts Tracy, Abbott and Shearman came in.

The Jury Enter the Room—A Disagreement.

The counsel all look solemn. After the applause had subsided, a dead silence prevailed All eyes were eagerly turned toward the door by which the jury were to enter. At 1.42 P. M., a tap was heard at the door, the usher opened it and the jury walked the jury. The Judge requested everybody to keep still and then the roll of the jury was called They had disagreed.

The Jury Interrogated by the Judge—His Remarks to them.

The Judge addressing the jury said: In reference, I learn from a communication from you that there is a difference between you I want to know if it is of fact or law?

Foreman—It is impossible for us to agree—which is to be decided being

Judge—Which is it, of fact or law?

Foreman—Of fact.

Judge—You see the embarrassment the court is under. The evidence was very fully discussed and then given to the jury and although this is your sixth day out I received from you to-day the first suggestion that you were not likely to agree. My impression was that you had a right to remain out without intruction even from the Court Until you requested the assistance of the Court I could send nothing to you without consent of counsel on both sides. I agreed I do let you have the evidence and I have believed that the jury were doing all they could toward an agreement and thus continuing their deliberations and not doubting your ability and industry.

Further Remarks of the Judge—The Jury Again Sent Out

Gen Jerlen—It is difficult to find a case where agreement by the jury would be more desirable. Attention has been called to the fact that after the close of the arguments some papers were handed up to me on application to receive more evidence and the next morning I denied the application The subject matter of the evidence was not stated to the counsel before the defendant I thought it proper to deny that motion and assumed that the jury would forget that evidence and not allow the matter to be disturbed by it, and of course it was a matter that you do not think of. I assume that you did not know, nor would I be satisfied conveniently to send to me some questions that savors of the question of Law on which I can instruct you?

Foreman—It is a difference of fact I must say there is not the slightest prospect of our agreeing.

Judge—Do you speak for all the jury?

Foreman—There is but one man on the jury who thinks that an agreement is possible

Judge—Because I drive a note from one of the jury which says he thinks further examination of the testimony ought to be made that I feel so strongly myself. Remember what I have said to you about the importance of an agreement Retire to your room, give the subject further consideration and report to me about 4 o'clock in the afternoon The jury then retired.

Juryman Plate looking Ill—Remarks to the Standing of the Jury—Reported Ill to L.

Juryman Plate looked very ill and he was observed to tremble while sitting in his chair. Some insist that the foreman has announced that they stand 11 to 1 and Juryman Plate has been singled out as the obstinate one in consequence of a fancied frown of defiance which they say he directed to the Beecher party when coming out. What the foreman really said was that only one juror thought an agreement was possible. The Judy looked very fatigued, especially the foreman and young Plate. The Jury on retiring engaged in the warmest debate they have had yet.

The Attendance at 4 P M.—A Great Crowd.

The same parties who were present this forenoon were in attendance at 4 p m Mrs. Beecher, Mrs Col, Beecher, Misses Beach and Judge Porter arrived together at 3.50. Mrs. Field Deacons Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Murray sat in the same row of chairs as the Beecher family. As everybody who could find room inside was allowed to go in, the court was crowded more than ever and recognized with the usual cheers, jokes and laughter. At 4 o'clock Tilton and a gentleman friend came in About half the audience clapped their hands for him When usher Caldwell came in carrying a chair in his hand. The audience greeted him with laughter and clapping of hands. Deacon Caldwell entering with an upholstered chair, was greeted with applause and laughter.

The negro Joseph Woodleigh, was amongst the audience. He declares counsellor Beach though able to read the signatures, is not able to expound them.

Arrival of the Judge—The Jury Out for Another Night

At twenty minutes to 5 o'clock Judge Neilson came into court and made the announcement, out of consideration for the audience, that he would not send for the jury to-night. His Honor was loudly applauded. The Court-room was then cleared and locked. Ninety-five reporters and other newspaper men were counted in Court to-day.

The Notes from the Jury to Judge Neilson

Below is the correspondence with the jury allnded to by Judge Neilson:

Eleven Jurors to the Judge: May it please the Court, we think there is no possibility of our agreeing on a verdict, and we respectfully ask to be discharged. (Signed) Chester Carpenter, A. E. Giles, Griffin S. Halstead, Edward Whelan, Henry Thayer William F. Jeffrey, George Hull, John McElwee, Christopher Hoch, William H. Davis, Samuel Plate.

Juryman Rejects the Judge: May it please the Court, don't think we ought to be discharged just yet. We are willing to hear the evidence, and Tilton we could possibly read one paper. (Signed) Chester Carpenter, F. Taylor.

The Judge says he will not take a compromise from the jury to-night.

Dr. Buddington on the Loader-Price Matter.

Rev. Dr. Buddington says to a reporter this evening that he was indignant at the statement in a Brooklyn paper connecting him with the Loader and Price matter.

THE LOADER-PRICE CASE.

The Testimony of Mr. Pearsall.

Rumor that Loader and Price are Arrested.

The Coup Refused.

NEW YORK, July 1. The case of Joseph Loader, the upholsterer, accused of swearing to false affidavits against Beecher, was resumed in the Third District Court in Brooklyn, to-day. The court-room was packed with spectators.

Joseph M. Pearsall's Testimony

Joseph M. Pearsall was first called to the stand He testified he was a clerk of Morris & Pearsall, and was also a notary public He knew both Loader and Price he first saw Price in the office of his employers; on the same date the witness and Morris on the sidewalk who wished him to swear Loader and Price. On entering the office he found the affidavit partly drawn up. Judge Morris, Gen. Dyker and Mr. Moulton were present. Tilton was in the back office Tilton has nothing to do with the affidavits Loader's affidavit was furnished by Moulton, after which it was read by Ged Pryor, and signed by Loader who carefully read it before affixing his signature. Price's affidavit was sworn to at the same time.

Mail Returned.

After more evidence was submitted in the Loader case, the Judge refused to admit him to bail, and the case went over till to-morrow.

A Rumor that Moulton and Morris are to be arrested for Conspiracy.

The Brooklyn Union says: "There was a rumor around the court room this afternoon that on the return of Francis D Moulton to the city, he will be arrested on the charge of conspiracy. The basis of this charge it is said will be the testimony of Joseph M. Pearsall one of the clerks of the firm of Morris & Pearsall, at Judge Riley's court this forenoon to the effect that it was Moulton who drew up the affidavits of Loader and Price as published elsewhere. Mr. Beecher's lawyers are to act on the subject, but it is claimed that an effort will be made to arrest Mr. Moulton.

THE POSTAL SERVICE

An Interview with the Postmaster-General—The Labors and Hospitals of the Service.

WASHINGTON, June 30. (By mail to New York.) The Postmaster General has been interviewed upon the results of his late tour of inspection. He is apparently much gratified with his trip, and what he saw and learned. He states he met with some five or six hundred postmasters, besides two or three thousand other post-office employes, and expresses himself as being pleased with their general appearance They gave him much information in regard to the practical workings of the postal laws and service. The postmasters were unanimously in favor of raising the rate of registration fees, from eight to ten cents, and the Postmaster-General made an order to that effect upon his return He was astonished at and the immense bulk and weight of the mails in the Middle and Western States By the largest routes between the West, and East from eighteen to twenty-five tons of mail matter are carried daily and handled in postal cars. The transfer in Chicago from road to road is sometimes one hundred tons per day. The postal clerks in the railway postal cars west of the Alleghanies assort and handle four millions of letters per month, no count of which could be possible to do in the post-offices. On one route from St. Louis to Texas an average of five tons of mail per day is carried.

The Pay of Employes

The Postmaster General is of the opinion that the clerks in the post-offices receive less compensation for the work they are required to do than any other men in the service. Many good clerks receiving from $500 to $800 per annum, are required from 10 to 12 hours per day, as great drudgery as the clerks in the Department at Washington, who are paid from $1200 to $1800 per annum and only required to work six or seven hours per day. He thinks the pay of the letter carriers is fair, though they have to work hard, and that the pay of the railway postal clerks is good, and that while many of them are overworked, some are not. It is a very difficult service to adjust equitably.

Saturday an Essential Element.

The Postmaster-General stated that no brigg was herein after to be given against clerks in the requirements for post-office duties, and that none but steady and sober men would be retained in any branch of service, and that this would include all the officers from Superintendents to assorting clerks on railways, and from postmasters to porters in post-offices.

The Free Delivery System—Offices, their Convenience and Appointment

It appears that free delivery as pivoted the necessity of having post-offices in central localities, as the Postmaster General thinks that public buildings, on economical principles with plenty of light, etc., would answer all the requirements quite as well as the costly structures being erected. The portion of the white building in which the Pittsburg office is located is altogether inadequate to the needs of the service. The offices is hot, dark, crowded and inconvenient with poor ventilation, and the letter carriers are crowded together like a penny sheep, and therefore it is impossible to do the business in such a place. It is a matter of prudence that the city is served as well as it is under such circumstances. The offices at St. Louis and Cincinnati are very dark, hot and close, and a large portion of the clerks are compelled to work by gas light during the day, but new buildings are being erected in each of these places. All changes that can be made in the interior arrangements of the offices will be made with all the necessary room for the complete working of the system, and the Postmaster-General thinks that the appropriations will come $50,000 per annum, which it has been found sufficient for the wants of the city. The Postmaster-General will submit to Congress a recommendation for the appointment of Superintendents of Mail Delivery in the larger cities like Chicago, [illegible] Boston, Philadelphia, [illegible] and New York, who shall have charge of the delivery system in their respective cities, and who shall be responsible to the Postmaster-General for the efficiency of the system.

Bishop's odd song, with flute obligato by Mr. Heindl, and was no less enjoyable in Reichel's "Bride Elect," for which an encore was received.

Of the instruments more enjoyable than Arnold's opera of the which replaced No. of the programme as originally prepared, and was the only substitution. In rapid and almost bewildering succession the composer presents a most exquisite combination, into which such that is oriental and sensuous, while the ensemble effects are brilliant and beautiful

The lovers of Wagner's music were treated to the Bridal march and bridesmaid's chorus from Lohengrin, which combines so much that is effect and zeal with that which is exultant and joyous. It was like a scene from the opera itself, so vividly did it recall gala nights at the Academy of Music in which Nilsson won some of her proudest triumphs The solo parts were well rendered we that delicacy, precision, and perfection of instrumentation that has given each of the individual members of the Mendelssohn rank as artists. That all the numbers were given as concientiously as though given to an audience of thousands, those present must think the performers who felt there was appreciation, in the hall.

THE REST OF OURS.

There's not a blossom of beautiful May,
Silver of dalisy or daffodil gay,
Nor the rose that blooms in the sweet flowers,
Fair as the face of this baby of ours.

You can never find on a bright June day
A bit of fair sky so blissery and gay,
Nor the dew on the hills, in noonday hours,
Blue As the eyes of this baby of ours.

There's not a murmur of wakening bird,
The clearest, sweetest, that ever was heard
In the leafy bosom of the dawn's still hours,
Soft as the laugh of this baby of ours

There's no gossamer silk or tasselled corn,
No full ear throned of the sky vessel born,
Not even the oat with spread over the flowers,
Fine as the hair of this baby of ours.

There's no fairy shell by the sounding sea,
No's lifeless shell robb on the misty hills,
So think of the sun through April's soft showers
Pink as the palms of this baby of ours.

May the dear Lord spare her to be, we pray,
For many a long and rambling day,
Ere He takes to bloom in Paradise bowers
This new bit darling—this baby of ours.

CONGENIALITY.

BY ELIZA SPENCER

[Concluded.]

He evidently hated her, and felt more at home with her than with the giddy things that had leveled at him their brilliant batteries, to which, as he was not versed in the accomplishment of small talk, he could not reply. She quickly understood his position, and with the instinct of a kindly heart, adapted herself to setting him at ease. She turned the conversation upon such subjects as she thought would least embarrass him. spoke of the works lately introduced there as if she was desirous of information, while carefully avoiding giving the discussion anything like a business-like air.

Her every expression, the gentle refinement of her manner, seemed to set upon him as a charm, and for the first time he found himself conversing with ease, with a cultivated lady. He appeared to care for no one else, though several, from different motives, sought to draw his attention elsewhere. Esther's friends did not care to have her so monopolized and wished to induce him more generally.

Upon the first opportunity, she managed adroitly to engage him in conversation with some one else, and taking a proffered arm, left him.

But when the evening was over, and she came down stairs with the other ladies, dressed and cloaked, as she was about to join her own quiet party, Mr. Vesey was there, and requested the pleasure of accompanying her home.

She could not accept, so he escorted her to the door.

"I have had delightful evening," he said, as she was about to bid him good-night. "I hope you have had also."

He said it with an earnestness that indicated his interest in her reply to a usually trivial remark.

She hesitated then answered a little doubtfully:

"It has been a long time since I was at an evening entertainment, but as my friends were kind enough to do all in their power to make it pleasant for me, it would have been ungrateful not to enjoy it."

He seemed disappointed. "You had to weigh your reply very carefully before you made it," he said.

"I always do, from habit, I suppose," she added laughingly. "But I hope you understand me. You know it requires some habits of gayety to enter fully into its spirit. As I am dependent upon myself for support my mode of life is not favorable to such indulgence, however agreeable it might be occasionally."

He bowed and left her. As she passed through the parlors on her way to her room, she saw young Joyce seated at a table in the back parlor, his books and writings in a perfect litter.

He looked jaded and worn. His head wearily supported on his hand, his compressed lips and listless attitude seemed to denote a period between almost despair and renewed exertion.

At Esther's entrance he looked up, and as their eyes met, he changed his position and made a courteous recognition of her presence.

"You are up late," said Esther. "Do your studies imperiously demand such a waste of the midnight oil?"

"They do just now," he replied. "As my room is home alone in the street it is totally distracted me so, everybody having retired, I came down here. But there's something twists in this affair. It requires a minuteness of examination, which in my present jaded state, I am unfitted for. My head back and crudely, and I had to desist for a moment."

"Why not take your rest now, and resume it early to-morrow?" asked Esther.

"I am afraid of my relaxed nervous system," he replied with something of a smile. Besides, these will be required early in the morning, and I have all these documents to copy. I could not sleep with such a weight of superfluous work upon my brain.

"No one assistant, Esther he hesitated, not from unwillingness, but difference.

"Let me take some of them," she said presently, in a kind, straightforward manner. "I am an early riser, and will have plenty of leisure to help you."

"Oh! no," he replied hastily, "this is not work for you. You have been up late, and will require longer rest in the morning."

"No I will not," she answered, smiling. "I make it a point of duty, however late I have been kept up, to rise always at the same hour every morning.

"Then that is wrong, and ruinous to our constitution. I think you owe duty to yourself, and should see in another three o'clock."

"Well, we'll waive that just now, for I am sure that, though you persuade a woman against her will, she always returns to first principles. Now, Mr. Joyce, you will not be troublesome. You see I will not be denied. They shall be returned to you to-morrow. If this shape you will decide. No one but myself shall know of it, and I will be discreet."

She laid hands upon them irresistibly, and quickly ran off with a smiling good night.

Herbert Joyce looked after her with such an expression as that with which a man might look upon his guardian angel—a mixture of regret and almost adoration.

But he was rewarded to think much of it then. Finding his self-constituted secretary leaving him, he closed his books and resigned to his room. As he passed the drawer of Esther's sitting-room, he heard a chuckle, and he paused a second with what might have been, if uttered, a blessing on his head.

Esther fulfilled her intention of rising early, and by nine o'clock the documents were copied and sent to Mr. Joyce. He thanked her, simply, when they met, but a grateful flush again suffused his cheek. Her manner was the perfect ease and freedom and to admit of more. She did not seem to think it had been anything at all, and treated it accordingly.

This, while it chilled him, yet more inflamed his admiration, for it proved the simple kindness, so devoid of all vanity, that had actuated her.

His case was well, even better than he had hoped. He was surprised at himself at his ready flow of language, in a maiden speech. Perhaps it was the thought of a cheerful flash again suffused his cheek. Her manner was perfect and neighbors and friends to admire
